

A necklace made by avant-garde sculptor Giò Pomodoro, on display at the Museo del Gioiello in Vicenza, Italy, through September.

Vicenza

Four years ago, the Museo del Gioiello (below, MuseoDelGioiello.it) — Italy's first museum dedicated entirely to jewelry — opened in this longtime goldsmithing city. Its current exhibition, open through the end of the year, chronicles the progression of jewelry, from hefty Iron Age earrings to high-tech designs produced using 3-D computer modeling — a signature of local powerhouse brand Roberto Coin (a major supporter of the museum). Where to stay & play: Soak up the Palladian architecture by staying in the city center, at Glam Boutique Hotel (GBoutiqueHotel.com), and try the fish-heavy Venetian cuisine at trattoria Al Pestello (Contrá Santo Stefano, 3).
